

Isle of Man Probate Trust

How does it work?

The Friends Provident International Isle of Man Probate Trust is designed for those individuals who wish to avoid the need for obtaining Isle of Man probate upon their death. This allows the policy proceeds to be paid without undue delay.

If the client is UK domiciled, then upon the client's death, the value of the policy is included in his or her estate for UK Inheritance Tax (IHT) purposes.

The client can submit the Isle of Man Probate Trust deed which nominates the trustees and the client is appointed as the sole beneficiary.

Once assigned into the trust, all trustee signatures will be required for any instructions to Friends Provident International (this includes any changes to the policy and any withdrawals or surrender requests).

As the client is the sole beneficiary, the client can have access to the monies from the policy.

Upon the client's death, Isle of Man probate would then be avoided.

Issues for consideration

- The Isle of Man Probate Trust can be used with a new application for a Friends Provident International policy, or with an existing Friends Provident International policy. However, this cannot be used where the existing policy is owned by a company or a trust.
- If it is decided at a later date that the client no longer wishes to have the policy in the trust, then the trustees can assign the ownership of the policy back to the client.
- Upon the death of the client, the trustees are bound by the terms of the clients will or the laws of intestacy as to who they can distribute the proceeds of the policy to.
- If there are surviving lives assured, or the policy is written on a capital redemption basis, the trustees can assign the ownership of the policy to a beneficiary aged 18 or over.
- If the client is UK domiciled, please note that the trust does not provide any UK Inheritance Tax (IHT) benefits. The value of the policy will form part of the client's estate for UK IHT.

Case study

Luke is resident in Brazil but is still domiciled in the UK. He invested £200,000 into a Friends Provident International insurance based product, written on a capital redemption basis.

He realises that upon his death, Isle of Man Probate will be required and would have to be paid before the policy could be transferred to his executors (and subsequently assigned to another individual in accordance with the terms of his will).

His executors or appointed solicitors, would have to undertake the administrative work associated with the Probate application, which can be time consuming. In addition, even if the paperwork is submitted correctly, the process can take around 4-6 weeks before Probate is granted.

Having discussed the matter with his financial adviser, Luke decides to transfer his policy to an Isle of Man Probate Trust. Luke will be the sole beneficiary and, if required can instruct the Trustees to transfer ownership of the policy back to him.

His adviser explains that Luke's wife and his executor could be also be additional trustees.

The reason for this is if there are no surviving trustees upon Luke's death, then Probate will be required before replacement trustees can be appointed.

From time to time Luke asks his trustees to make withdrawals from the policy and pay these direct into his personal bank account.

Luke dies 15 years after establishing the trust. Amy, his wife who is also UK domiciled, survives him. As the policy was written on a capital redemption basis, it does not come to an end on Luke's death. As it is held by trustees (in an Isle of Man Probate Trust) the policy is not an asset of Luke's estate for Isle of Man Probate purposes.

Under the terms of his will, Luke has left the policy specifically to Amy and the trustees assign it to Amy in accordance with his wishes. Although the value of the policy at the time of Luke's death is in his estate for UK Inheritance Tax purposes, the spouse exemption applies and no Inheritance Tax is payable on his death.
